Extension Activities:

1. Try balancing things on your head. You can start with caps like in the story, or try other things. How many pieces can you balance at once? Can you do it while standing? Sitting? Walking? Are some things easier to balance than others?
2. Go for a walk out into the country like the peddler. Walking trails in parks are generally still open, or stroll around your neighborhood.
3. Check out live streams of monkeys from the zoos. The Detroit Zoo has one: <https://detroitzoo.org/snow-monkey-live-cam/> So does the San Diego Zoo: <https://zoo.sandiegozoo.org/cams/ape-cam>
4. The monkeys imitated everything the peddler did. Try playing Simon Says or Follow the Leader--both involve mimicking actions. Don't remember how to play? You can find the rules here: <https://www.considerable.com/entertainment/games/simon-says/> and here: <https://www.considerable.com/entertainment/games/follow-the-leader/>
5. Discuss how you react when people don't treat you nicely. How does it make you feel? What kinds of things do you do in response? Are there better and worse ways to react?
