

How the Crayons Saved the Rainbow
By Monica Sweeney
Illustrated by Feronia Parker Thomas

Available on Hoopla (<https://www.hoopladigital.com/>)
Youtube (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xfTleKPdg40>)

Extension Activities:

1. Play color I Spy. "I spy something _green_" Take turns riddling and guessing.
2. Get out some crayons and color a gloriously colorful picture!
3. Make a rainbow craft. Cut a paper plate in half. Color one side like the sun, glue cotton balls on the other side like a cloud. Attach strips of paper hanging down from the flat side of the half-circle, one per color of the rainbow. Color them with crayons, or get creative--use fruit loops, tissue paper, buttons, pompoms, or anything else you have in the various colors. See example image in the comments.
4. If you have sidewalk chalk, draw rainbows on your sidewalk to brighten your neighborhood!
5. Discuss--talk about a time you were angry with a friend. What happened? Were you able to make up and be friends again? How did you do that? What are some good and bad ways of behaving when you're angry? When you start to feel angry, what are some things you can do about it?

